Japan Association of Nursing Programs in Universities
Standards of an Educational Curriculum for Advanced Practice Nurses

Education Philosophy for Advanced Practice Nurses

The educational curriculum is intended to foster the following human resources: An advanced practice nurse is an excellent nursing care provider who uses knowledge and techniques of advanced nursing freely to a patient, family and population by integrating care and cure and coordinates/manages prevention and treatment of a disease, cure, and life process in general. The role is to implement advanced care based on its specialty, provide education or consultation to care providers including nurses, research, coordinate a healthcare/welfare team, and coordinate ethical issues. An advanced practice nurse also gives a challenge to a new issue in its professional discipline with comprehensive judgment and organized problem-solving ability and serves as a change agent who has a developmental role to reflect educational or political issues as well as in practice.

Common Purpose of an Advanced Practice Nurse (Standard Skill Level)

An advanced practice nurse is a certified nurse who has “advanced practical skill of nursing integrating care and cure” in a certain nursing field.

An advanced practice nurse has the following role in each nurse specialist field:

- 1) Implements advanced nursing integrating care and cure to a patient, family and population in a nurse specialist field (“Practice”).
- 2) Has an educational role for nurses to improve care in a nurse specialist field (“Education”).
- 3) Provides consultation to care providers including nurses in a nurse specialist field (“Consultation”).
- 4) Coordinates parties related to healthcare and welfare to provide necessary care smoothly in a nurse specialist field (“Coordination”).
- 5) Administers research activities in a practical field to improve or develop technical knowledge and techniques in a nurse specialist field (“Research”).
- 6) Performs ethical coordination between related parties in terms of ethical issues or conflicts in a nurse specialist field (“Ethics”).

Standards of an Educational Curriculum

- 1) The standards should follow the approval standards of an educational curriculum for advanced practice nurses, article 4 (2) A, B, and C.

- 2) Common subjects or common subjects A should be selected from the 7 subjects below which should be taken more than 8 units: 1) Nursing Education, 2) Nursing Management, 3) Nursing Theoretics, 4) Nursing Research, 5) Consultation, 6) Nursing Ethics, and 7) Nursing Politics.
- 3) Common subjects B should be selected from the 3 subjects below which should be taken more than 6 units: 1) Physical Assessment, 2) Pathophysiology, and 3) Clinical Pharmacology.
- 4) The standards of a special educational curriculum for each nurse specialist field are presented in appendix.
- 5) It is important to guarantee educational quality of practical training because the training improves essential practical skill for advanced practice nurses. Therefore, the practical training should not emphasize a focus on only practicing, but also enhancing necessary practical skill for advanced practice nurses, reforming nursing activities with inventive approach, and maintaining skill to develop such activities in a socially organized way by taking advantage of various methods, such as supervision, case studies, or discussion seminars.
